Jenifer Nursery and Primary School: A Journey of Growth, Learning, and Unforgettable Moments.

thelifeofmine3.wordpress.com/2022/01/07/jenifer-nursery-and-primary-school/

January 6, 2022

After my accident, I had to take a one-year break from school. When I was ready to resume my studies, I joined a school called Jenifer School, which happened to be near my home. I attended this school from grades one to five.

Jenifer School was a small institution. In my class, there were two sections. I ended up in the first-grade class with the recommendation of Merlin's mother, who happened to be my class teacher. Her recommendation played a role in my enrollment.

Throughout my time at Jenifer School, I stood out as the only student who wore color dresses instead of the typical uniform. Additionally, I didn't attend full-day classes. Instead, I would go home during every lunch break. I remember sitting at the first bench near the wall, but my memories of those days are somewhat hazy, and I don't have personal notes to refer to. However, I do recall feeling like a special and important girl because of my unique dress and the fact that I attended only half-day classes.

JENNIFER EXPRESS
DAY CARE

Teachers: A closer look

In my first grade, Merlin's mother was my class teacher. In the following years, I had different teachers for each grade. In the second grade, I had Poongadi Miss as my teacher, followed by Jothi Miss in the third grade, Nirmala Miss in the fourth grade, and Shengkodi Miss in the fifth grade.

At our school, each teacher was responsible for teaching multiple subjects. Our class teachers took on the role of teaching all the subjects to us. This meant that we had the same teacher for every subject throughout the year😅.

The Impact of Friends: How They Shape Our Lives

Vithya was a close friend of mine who lived near my home. We developed a strong bond and spent a lot of time together. She would often help me catch up on the homework I missed during lunch breaks. After school, we would regularly meet at my home. There were occasions when I would take advantage of our friendship by asking Vithya to cover for me when it came to homework. I would convince her to tell my parents that the teacher hadn't assigned any homework, allowing me to avoid any consequences. It was a mischievous act on my part, seeking her assistance for such purposes. 😝

Dhana Jothi was my best friend during the time I was in first to third grade. We sat next to each other in class, and naturally, we became close friends. She had two older brothers named Raju and Sridhar. Dhana Jothi would often come to visit me, sometimes accompanied by Raju, her second older brother. We would spend a lot of time playing indoor games together, such as carrom and cards. One of our favorite childhood games was playing with the Kitchen Set😍, where we would pretend to cook and serve food. However, at some point, Dhana Jothi changed schools, and we had to part ways. It brought about a mixture of emotions, but I look back on our friendship with fondness. 😁

Yogeshwari became my friend and took Dhana Jothi's place for two years. She was a smart and intelligent girl who brought a new dynamic to our friendship circle.

I had three benchmates named Kalpana, Sandhya, and Sasikala. Since my home was conveniently close to the school, they would often come to visit me during lunch breaks. Their frequent visits added an extra element of friendship and camaraderie to our daily school routine.

Girls:

Pricila, Sandhya, Kalpana, Ziba, Yogeshwari, Saranya, Sasikala, Swathi, Gowri, Vithya, Nayana Krishna, Sharmila, prabha (sorry if I forget to mention anybody's name 😅)…

Boys:

Stephen, Nelson, Prashanth, Karthick, Ravi, Umesh, Balaji, Muthukumar, Praveen Raj, Rajkumar, Sharma, Ragulesh, Madan, Vinoth, Praveen, Vijay, Dinesh, Gowshik Pradip, Sekar, Poovarasan, Asaithambi, Naveen, Selva kumar (sorry if I forget to mention anybody's name 😅)…

"Life is a precious gift, filled with infinite possibilities. Embrace each moment, for it holds the power to shape your destiny."